Reducing emergency admissions for primary constipation: a pilot study to cut costs in an acute hospital trusts

Sandra Blythin, Julie McAteer, Zoe Crook, Mike Walker

Hot off the press a fantastic and informative article (CLICK HERE) of a pilot study to prevent unnecessary constipation admissions, reduce costs and develop a structured emergency constipation pathway in an acute hospital trust. Well done to the team at Aintree University Hospital for an incredible piece of research that is likely to make a difference to so many hospitals within the NHS.

Qufora Irrigation system had changed little Mason's life

"Everyone's experience is different, but our lives have been so improved by using this form of bowel management with my son.

When a doctor said Mason would need an "ACE procedure" (surgery to make a hole in the bowel to flush it). I cried and cried it would be too much for Mason with all his other needs...this is where the dream came true and we were told about "Qufora Rectal irrigation". Its been life changing for us.
