Dealing with a patient's chronic constipation

The Bowel Interest Group (BIG) in response to their recent survey regarding chronic constipation have successfully produced an outstanding information pack, which summarises key research and treatment options amalgamating them into a diagram. Not only does this provide a best practice pathway, it also highlights the point at which other treatments are to be made available.

As a result, this is likely to drive cost efficiency in the NHS and significantly improve a patient's quality of life and experience in a timely fashion.

Well done BIG, yet again valuable information that lends itself towards achieving a coherent approach to the care of chronic constipation.

We would like to assure that event during this difficult time myqufora team are operating as normal and will be supporting your patients who are in need of help or advice like this patient below:

*"My confidence grew after discussing my problems with the myqufora support team. I struggled with the cone system with the bag and long tubing. I stopped using it before going on holiday, I had a phone call from the support team when I returned from holiday, she listened to my problems and gave me some suggestions. I get on with that well and was able to tell the support team when she phoned back." Qufora patient
